EQUAL JUSTICE AMERICA LAW STUDENT FELLOWSHIPS

Since 1993—working to protect children and families in need

The promise of equal justice is the promise of America. "With liberty and justice for all," are the words recited every day by our nation's school children. It is a promise that has not been kept. The American Bar Association estimates that the United States fails to meet 80% of the civil legal needs of the poor. Unlike criminal defendants who are guaranteed an attorney under the U.S. Constitution, most low-income litigants must face adversarial proceedings without the benefit of counsel.

80% of the legal needs of the poor are not being met.

—American Bar Association

As a result, women and children victimized by domestic violence do not get the legal help they desperately need. Families are wrongfully evicted and forced into homelessness. The elderly and poor have no recourse when they fall prey to scams in the marketplace. The disabled are discriminated against without the representation they need to protect their rights. Bureaucratic abuse and neglect go without remedy, often causing families to lose life-sustaining benefits. There can be no justice for those forced to face these struggles without the help of an attorney.

Who We Are

Equal Justice America is an independent non-profit 501(c)(3) corporation established in 1993. EJA has become a national leader in providing opportunities for law students to work with organizations that deliver civil legal services to the poor. Our efforts expose a new generation of future lawyers to the urgency of pro bono assistance to those in need. Students at more than 70 law schools now have the opportunity to take part in the Equal Justice America Fellowship Program.

What We've Done

- Equal Justice America has sponsored more than 2,500 law students to work with nearly 400 legal services organizations across the country. Interning under the supervision of experienced attorneys, our fellowship recipients have provided crucial assistance to low-income clients struggling through the complexities of our civil justice system.
- EJA has paid out more than $7.5 million in grants and has provided approximately 750,000 hours of free legal services with programs that work to protect the rights of the poor.
- In September 2002, we began funding two-year post-graduate EJA Fellowships, launching the public interest careers of outstanding young attorneys. Nearly $1 million has been committed to these post-graduate fellowships.
- In September 2000, Pace University Law School established the Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic with a major grant and an ongoing commitment from EJA. We have contributed more than $300,000 to the EJA Clinic, which has become an integral part of the Law School's highly regarded clinical program.

What They're Saying About Equal Justice America...

"EJA supports legal services for those in need by raising funds for fellowships that expose law students to the challenges and rewards of legal services work. Through EJA Fellowships, law students learn by example, gaining real world experience by helping actual clients and learning basic public interest lawyering skills. Even small donations can inspire budding lawyers to devote years—and in some cases careers—to serving the needy and the public interest."

– Harold Hongju Koh
Dean, Yale Law School

"Our office would like to sincerely thank you for providing us with such great talent over the past two months. In my seven years with Legal Aid, Hannah Akintoye is no doubt the best summer intern we have had. She proved an invaluable member of our team by contributing to the handling of our workload from the very first day. Hannah gained in-depth experience in a wide variety of practice areas, including elder law, protection from abuse cases, criminal records expungement, child dependency cases, social security and unemployment compensation hearings and housing law. We are very grateful for the opportunity provided by Equal Justice America for allowing us to work with Hannah this summer."

– David J. Bennethum
*Managing Attorney
Legal Aid of Southeastern Pennsylvania*

"Equal Justice America has quietly and effectively provided important support to the practice of public interest law, by funding law students whose talent, commitment and enthusiasm contributes immeasurably to this work. Equal Justice America's leadership is an invaluable help in ensuring that the next generation of idealistic young lawyers will be able to continue the tradition of public service."

– Christine Todd
*Vice President, Administration
The Legal Aid Society of San Francisco*

"Lawyers must assist this program by donating funds so that it can continue and grow. One of the highest goals of our justice system is to insure proper representation of all persons who appear before the courts. Equal Justice America is fighting to achieve this worthy objective. It needs and deserves your support."

II. Summary and Achievements

Through my Equal Justice America fellowship, I am working at the JustChildren program of the Legal Aid Justice Center in the Petersburg office. The Legal Aid Justice Center provides legal services to low-income individuals in Virginia. JustChildren works to improve Virginia's public education, juvenile justice, and foster care systems through a variety of means, including community organizing, individual representation, and state-level advocacy. As the only JustChildren attorney in the Petersburg office, I concentrate on representing individual clients, but also participate in several state-level policy projects and assist our community organizer in local activities.

In Petersburg, the need for free legal services for children is high. Seventy-six percent of students in Petersburg qualified for free or reduced lunch for the 2010-11 school year, compared to 38% statewide. Out of the seven schools in the long-struggling Petersburg City Public Schools (PCPS), none made adequately yearly progress under No Child Left Behind last year. With a juvenile population of around 3000, there were almost 600 complaints to the juvenile court in Petersburg in 2010.

My project focuses on advocating for at-risk youth who are encountering problems with the education system, with the majority of my time spent representing individual clients. My typical client is a student who receives special education services and has been encountering disciplinary issues at school. Most of these students have been suspended or expelled, with some referred to the juvenile court. Other clients do not have severe disciplinary issues, but their special education services are severely lacking. I represent clients at suspension and expulsion hearings, advocate on their behalf at meetings of their special education teams, and request that school districts provide them with necessary education services.

As described in more detail below, I have experienced some significant successes in the first six months of my fellowship. I have helped several students reenroll on school, one after a lengthy period of truancy. I have helped several other students who were not being served properly at their current educational placement transfer to one better suited to meet their individual needs. I have helped several other students secure more appropriate services at their current placements. Since beginning my fellowship in the fall, I have helped twenty youth improve their educational opportunities.

Other clients have not reached success so quickly. With some cases, the school districts resist providing my clients with the educational services they need to be successful. In those cases, I am working with the clients to obtain independent special education evaluations, seek expert help, and develop a legal case against the school district's faulty decisions.

In addition to providing individual advocacy, I have been able to assist with some of JustChildren's statewide policy projects. In one, we are working with the Department of Juvenile Justice and the Department of Corrections to ensure that juvenile offenders are properly credited for time served pre-detention. In another, we are working with the State Department of Education to make sure that parents are provided with a full opportunity to file a state complaint against a school district that is not providing their children with appropriate special education services.

Through my work with our community organizer, I have also been able to interact more directly with a large number of community members. I have provided trainings to members of the local preschool's PTA, where meetings are attended by up to 200 parents. I have advised fathers who reside in local public housing about their children's education rights. I have attended a number of school board and city council meetings, following a number of issues related to Petersburg City Public Schools. This information gathering has allowed me to identify issues that affect groups of Petersburg students, such as inadequate tracking of student attendance and performance at the alternative education program, that I plan on addressing in upcoming months.

In the process of helping my clients, I have been able to hone my oral and written advocacy skills. The Legal Aid Justice Center has provided me with the training and support I need to become an effective attorney and advocate. Overall, I am making substantial progress toward my goal of improving educational outcomes for at-risk youth.

III. Case Examples

All of the children that I have represented face significant challenges in receiving a quality education. They face health issues, family issues, and school issues that greatly affect their learning.

Although the schools often identify the challenges facing these students, they still fail for years to provide them with services designed to address these challenges. As a result, the students fall farther and farther behind, and act out as a result of their educational deficiencies.

One client and his parent came to seek our help after recently moving to the Petersburg area. The student, a ninth grader, had been placed in the alternative program based solely upon his record from his previous school district. Although the student is sixteen and performing above grade level in math, he is reading and writing at a second grade level. The school district decided not to provide him with any special reading or writing instruction, instead enrolling him in ninth grade English.

Soon after enrolling in the alternative program, the student was expelled for bringing a weapon to school. The district decided to provide the student with only 10 hours a week of instruction at his home for the extent of his 365-day expulsion. I helped the parent request that the school district provide a more appropriate placement and literacy services, and had an education expert review the students' records to confirm that the district must provide the student with additional reading and writing help. Unfortunately, the district continues to refuse to provide additional help, and I am working with the family on further action.

A parent of a sixth grade student having trouble at school called our office after the school determined that he did not qualify for special education services. His teacher noted on his most recent report card that although he paid attention in class, participated, and tried on all of his work, he failed to understand the material. Recent educational evaluations indicate that he is significantly behind his peers in academic achievement and that he most likely has a learning disability. Yet after a cursory review of his record, the school district decided that he did not need special education services to address these issues. I helped the mother request and gain approval for an independent educational evaluation that she can use to demonstrate her child's need for additional services at school.

IV. Success Stories

In the first six months of my fellowship, I have helped several families improve the educational outcomes of their children. One client that I have been assisting for several months has seen some recent successes. He and his grandmother asked us for help with an expulsion last winter. The student, who receives special education services, is fifteen, but he operates on a third grade level in reading and math. The school district knew of the student's educational difficulties, but only provided him with ten hours a week of instruction at his home for the duration of his expulsion. The school district denied repeated requests to move the student to a private special education day school that serves students with significant special education needs.

In the spring, the student's family moved to a new school district. I wrote a letter to the new district describing the student's special education history, his current need, and the deficiencies in his current placement and services. The new district's special education team agreed with my recommendation that the student would be better served by a special education day placement, and has enrolled him there for the fall. They also will provide the student with services over the summer, so that he may recover some of the credits and class time he lost as a result of the previous school district's decision to provide him with only ten hours a week of instruction.

Another client came to our office with his parent after being suspended from his private special education day placement. The school did not provide the child with due process; it simply told the student to go home and not come back. The parent needed help to transfer the child to a more appropriate day placement. After the parent, child, and I met with the child's special education team at his original placement, the team agreed that the child should be placed at the school requested by the parent. The student began attending the new school the following school day.

The grandmother of a high school student with Asperger's syndrome contacted our office with serious concerns about her granddaughter's ability to transition into college or employment post-high school. For all students with disabilities, schools are obligated to create a transition plan, providing instruction and services designed to help students with the post-high school transition. Although the grandmother had tried working with the school to formulate an effective plan, she had not been successful in bringing the school to the table. After I contacted the school district on her behalf, the special education director scheduled a meeting to design a transition plan and help ensure that the student received the support she needed to be successful after high school. The grandmother reported that the meeting was scheduled more quickly, the participants were more helpful, and things ran more smoothly as a result of my intervention.

Within the first few weeks of starting at JustChildren, I received a call from a mother whose two children had been denied enrollment in school. As a result of domestic violence, the family had become homeless, forced to move in with a relative. Because the relative did not live within the family's original school district, that school district disenrolled the children. Because the family members were not residents of the new school district, it refused to enroll the children. I contacted the state coordinator for the homeless education act, McKinney-Vento, and within three school days, the original district reenrolled the children in school.

Another parent sought my help because her daughter was being bullied at school. Despite repeated problems, the school administration did not address the bullying. After I contacted the school on the mother's behalf, the principal called a meeting with all the students involved in the bullying and their parents. After the meeting, the bullying stopped.

V. Challenges

In the first six months of my fellowship, I have identified three major challenges I face regularly: client attitudes, resistance from school districts, and financial constraints.

As an education attorney, my client base mainly consists of teenagers who have struggled with school for years. Parents come to JustChildren after their children have been suspended or expelled, or when they refuse to attend school at all. Several of my clients have missed so much school that they have been referred to the juvenile court to address their truancy. Many tell me that they just do not want to go to school anymore. As the students' attorney, I must balance my duty to advocate for my clients' expressed interests with my duty to counsel them on the consequences of any actions we may take with regards to their education. With each client, I explain the importance of obtaining a high school degree, and describe the serious consequences that can arise from a truancy petition or other matters that are referred to the court. This helps them make more informed decisions about their own education. For the most part, they acknowledge the value of a high school degree and help me design an education plan that will address their individual needs.

My second major challenge arises when I begin communicating with the school districts to improve the services provided to my clients. Although everyone's ultimate goal is to provide a quality education for our students, the process often becomes adversarial. Once I contact school districts, they normally engage their attorney, making the process lengthier and more contentious. In order to address this issue, I often begin my representation by offering counsel and advice to clients, strengthening their voice rather than becoming their spokesperson. For example, if a parent wants help requesting a special education evaluation for her child, I will explain to her the steps she should take and who to contact. Once the parent knows the correct process, she is able to advocate for her child herself. I take on a more visible role only if the school does not properly respond to the parent's request.

Institutionally, financial constraints affect my work in several ways. Local school districts have sustained budget cuts every year for the past few years. This year, Petersburg had to cut 24 teaching positions. The requests that I make on behalf of my clients are often pricey; some need private tutors, other need placement at private schools, and others need one-on-one aides. I presume that a lot of the resistance coming from the school districts is not because they disagree that the student needs additional services, but rather because the services would add further strain to an already reduced budget. As a result, I end up asking for less expensive services for students in conjunction with the more expensive services. The schools often provide the less expensive services to the student while I continue to argue for the remaining necessary services, allowing the student to progress in the meantime.

The constraints of working in a legal aid office also affect my work. As the JustChildren attorney for the Petersburg office, I am responsible for each of my cases from start to finish, as well as some policy work and community organizing work. Most of my cases are resolved at the school district level, but some will likely not be resolved without more formal legal action. The Legal Aid Justice Center often enlists the aid of pro bono attorneys for these cases. I have formed a partnership with a law firm that often takes on pro bono education cases. I am working with the firm to take legal action for my cases that have not been resolved properly at the local level.

VI. Goals for the Next Six Months

As I describe in more detail in the section below, I have learned a great deal in the first six months of my fellowship. I have concentrated on direct representation, but have also gained experience helping with larger policy projects and community organizing. Over the next six months, I hope to continue making gains in all three areas. Overall, I hope to establish myself as a resource for local parents to use in obtaining a quality education for their children.

I aim to maintain a caseload of approximately ten to fifteen cases education cases. This will allow me to continue to develop my advocacy skills, as well as monitor the local school systems from the ground level. Each client who seeks my help is unique, and I plan to assist each in obtaining an education designed to fit his or her individual needs. This will include counseling the clients, writing letters on their behalf, attending meetings at the school and in the community for them, and if necessary, taking formal legal action. In order to increase my visibility in the community, I plan on holding trainings about my role as an education attorney for local juvenile court employees, social workers, and juvenile probation officers. These individuals will become an important source of client referrals.

I also plan to follow through on local and statewide policy projects already in progress, and identify and pursue other policy issues that arise. I am currently involved in two statewide policy projects – investigating a failure by DJJ and the Department of Corrections to properly credit youth for time served in pre-trial detention, and broadening the use of Virginia Department of Education’s special education state complaint process. Work on these projects will extend into the second half of this year. On a more local level, I have been monitoring Petersburg’s disciplinary reporting and its use of an alternative education program. In the coming months, I will help evaluate our findings and implement an appropriate plan of action for any findings of concern.

I will also continue to assist our community organizer in her projects to transform community involvement in the local school districts. I currently attend many community events, and provide training for parents on their educational rights. As the community organizing efforts continue, I will continue to provide support and trainings for community members and parents.

VII. Personal Experience

In the first six months of my fellowship, I have improved upon my existing oral and written advocacy skills, and have begun developing grant-writing skills.

As a judicial law clerk before my fellowship began, I developed strong legal writing skills. This fellowship has provided me with the opportunity to develop my ability to write persuasively, advocating for a client rather than deciding between two competing sides. I have drafted letters to school districts on behalf of most of my clients, describing their individual histories and requesting education plans designed to meet their needs. These letters often help persuade the schools to provide my clients with necessary services.

In addition to improving my persuasive writing skills, I have been able to work on my oral advocacy skills. At expulsion hearings and special education team meetings, I advocate on my client's behalf. I am learning how to effectively describe their needs, and work with the schools to convince them of the need to provide my clients with necessary services. It is these oral advocacy skills on which I have concentrated, and improved the most. Unlike with writing, I have not had extensive experience advocating for clients at meetings and hearings, and consider it to be the most potentially persuasive area of advocacy. It is at these meetings where school administrators and school board members make their decisions concerning the students, and an effective advocate can make a big difference in influencing their decisions.

Partially because of the strong writing skills I developed during my judicial clerkship, I will become a part of the Legal Aid Justice Center's grant-writing team. I will be developing grant-writing skills that will be a valuable asset for sustaining my project once EJA funding comes to an end.

VIII. Media

Although there has not been local press coverage of my fellowship project, there have been several press outreach efforts. In September, shortly after I began my fellowship, I appeared on a local weekly radio show, hosted by our community organizer and focusing on education issues. The show is broadcast by Virginia State University's radio station, WVST 91.3 FM. I used the opportunity to introduce myself and my project to the greater Petersburg community.

Along with a number of Legal Aid staff, I was featured in the Legal Aid Justice Center's annual report. The report highlighted client advocacy, and included a brief description of one of my cases, along with a picture of me with my client. The report is distributed widely to funders and other stakeholders.

I have also formed a relationship with the opinions editor of the Petersburg newspaper. As part of my work with our community organizer, I help community members draft and submit letters to the editor and op-eds.

IX. Orientation, Training, Supervision, Support

[This section was completed by Sylvia Jones, Managing Attorney – Petersburg Office, (804) 862-2205.]

Progress of the Fellow and Project

Nicole has excelled along many dimensions in the short time she has been here. Her analytical abilities and writing skills are particularly impressive. She has tackled her individual cases with fervor and demonstrated a high level of empathy toward clients. At the same time, she has managed to move forward on long-term projects that could have a broader impact on our client community. She has also demonstrated initiative in identifying and pursuing systemic problems that she encounters in her work. Nicole has provided support to our organizing work and is beginning to develop relationships with community members that will be invaluable to our organizing and advocacy work in Petersburg. She is a great fit in the Petersburg office and an asset to the community.

Nicole's feedback on grant reports and proposals has been invaluable and her insight is particularly impressive given that she is new to fundraising. Nicole is highly organized and has a structured approach to handling tasks. While she shows a willingness to ask questions and accept supervision, she also demonstrates an internal confidence and motivation to work independently. When she does ask questions, they are always well analyzed and presented, indicating that she has done good research and considered a variety of options and opportunities. She exercises good judgment, maturity and level-headedness by not getting overly emotional in the midst of difficult tasks and tough situations. I feel that every child she represents gets thoughtful advocacy.

LAJC's Performance in Supporting the Project and its Goals, Orientation, Training Supervision, Support

The Legal Aid Justice Center has provided continued training and support for Nicole to successfully fulfill her project goals. On her first day, she went through a brief orientation to the Petersburg office and the JustChildren program. I was assigned as her mentor to provide her case handling guidance and other support. In addition, the JustChildren legal director, Angela Ciolfi, provides substantial support and supervision. Experienced JustChildren staff accompanied Nicole to her initial expulsion hearings before a school superintendent and a school board. Nicole attended the Statewide Legal Aid Conference, where she went to workshops designed to increase her knowledge and skills in several areas of law covered by legal services, including educational advocacy.

Plans for Support for the Next Six Months

LAJC plans to continue the support that has been established in the first six months of Nicole's fellowship. I will continue to provide mentoring and guidance on individual cases. Nicole will also be provided with opportunities to witness best practices in case handling by observing IEP meetings and other education-related hearings with more experienced advocates. We will also help Nicole identify opportunities for research and writing projects, such as journal submissions, so that she can continue to develop her writing skills.

Dear Dan:

I am pleased to report to you the work that has been accomplished thanks to the generous on-going support of Equal Justice America. It is no exaggeration to say that this work would not have been possible without Equal Justice America's commitment to our program.

The Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic has become an integral part of the Pace Law School's outstanding clinical program. In all of our client representation clinics, the students are the lawyers, fully responsible for all aspects of the cases they handle. The clinics thus serve a dual role – the training of future lawyers and the provision of legal services to the underserved in Westchester County and its surroundings.

Since the Clinic was established at Pace Law School in ninety-four students have enrolled in the Clinic. They have assisted 165 clients in a wide range of litigation and transactional matters. Sixty clients were represented in proceedings to become the guardians of their developmentally disabled adult relatives, usually children, but also grandchildren, siblings and nieces and nephews. With our help, eight clients have also created special needs trusts for their children, and engaged in other specialized estate planning to ensure that the disabled person is able to benefit from any inheritance without losing government benefits. Twenty-eight clients signed wills that were drafted by our students. Many of these wills contained special needs trusts to benefit a disabled family member. In addition, these clients signed health care proxies, living wills and powers of attorney, ensuring that their own wishes would be honored, should they become incapacitated. Our students have handled the administration of seven estates, some for the beneficiaries of wills that the Clinic had drafted.

Forty-one cases involved access to government benefits: Seventeen clients received Social Security Disability or SSI benefits after being represented in an administrative hearing by our students. Another eight clients had their overpayments waived by the Social Security Administration. Three clients were able to stay in their homes with increased home care hours after students represented them in Fair Hearings before the Department of Health. Two clients obtained Medicaid coverage for needed assistive technology, again after being represented at Fair Hearings. Three clients were able to maintain full Medicaid coverage, after receiving assistance from our Clinic.

We have also assisted nine clients who had filed discrimination cases pro se. Settlements were obtained in three cases, including an age discrimination case in Federal Court. A three-day hearing before the Westchester County Human Rights Commission resulted in a very favorable decision for an elderly client.

Finally our students have assisted twelve families obtain appropriate special education services for their school-age children.

For most of these clients, there was no other source of free legal services. None could afford pay for the required legal assistance. For our students, the experience gained from representing real clients with real problems has prepared them in ways that classroom learning cannot for their work as practicing attorneys.

All of us at Pace Law School are most grateful for the continuing support of Equal Justice America and your personal commitment to our mission.

Sincerely yours,

Gretchen

FINAL REPORT

Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic

John Jay Legal Services

Pace University School of Law

June 30, 2011

Introduction

Completing its eleventh year of operation, the Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic at Pace University School of Law continues its dual mission of training future lawyers and providing free legal services to low income disabled persons and their families.

Pace Law School's clinical offerings, under the umbrella of John Jay Legal Services, enable students to gain proficiency in lawyering skills while representing clients pursuant to a Student Practice Order issued by the Appellate Division, Second Department of the New York State Supreme Court. Under supervision of full-time clinical faculty, students enrolled in clinical courses perform all lawyering functions normally reserved to lawyers admitted to practice. In addition to the Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic, John Jay Legal Services also provides representation to individuals by student attorneys enrolled in the Investor Rights Clinic (formerly the Securities Arbitration Clinic), the Barbara Salken Criminal Justice Clinic, the Post-Conviction Clinic, and the Immigration Justice Clinic. In addition to these client representation clinics, field work in the non-profit legal arena is available to students through the Legal Services/Public Interest/Health Law Externship, the Family Court Externship, the Prosecution Externship, the Environmental Law Externship, and the Honors Prosecution Externship, a joint undertaking with the Westchester County District Attorney's Office.

The Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic

The Equal Justice America Disability Rights Clinic provides students with the opportunity to learn and apply lawyering skills as well as the substantive law relating to the rights of disabled persons in a highly controlled and intensively supervised legal practice environment. For most students, it is their first experience with law as lawyers.

For the 2010-2011 academic year, the Clinic was again offered as a two-semester course. Six students participated in the Clinic. Three students were part-time evening students and took the clinic for 4 credits each semester; the rest were full-time day students who took the clinic for 6 credits each semester. All students participated in the seminar which provided two academic credits each semester and each student's case load for the remaining clinical credits was tailored to his or her interests and time constraints. Students are expected to spend on average five hours per week per clinical credit on case-related work.

For the first time, Special Education law was integrated into the Clinic and student work on these cases was supervised by Prof. Flint. Previously a small number of students had worked exclusively on Special Education cases under the supervision of Prof. Don Doernberg.

The Seminar Component

In a weekly seminar, students learn and practice lawyering skills such as interviewing, counseling, negotiation, fact investigation, and conducting administrative hearings. The learning of these skills is integrated with relevant substantive law, including eligibility for the government benefit programs available to disabled persons (Social Security Disability, Supplemental Security Income, Medical Assistance) and the planning tools available to disabled persons and their families (guardianships, wills, special needs trusts). The seminar also provides the opportunity for students to present issues and choices from the cases they are working on and benefit from the critical reflection of their colleagues. Ethical issues are discussed as they arise in individual cases with particular emphasis on the complexities of working with clients of diminished mental capacity. Students learn how to read and interpret medical records and work with medical personnel to describe a client's medical condition using legally relevant terminology. Students also learn how to work with other helping professionals, such as social workers, doctors, nurses and advocates, to identify and meet clients' non-legal needs. Readings focused on learning lawyering skills are supplemented with readings directly relevant to disability law.

The Case Work Component

Clinic students, either individually or in teams, have primary responsibility for the conduct of their assigned cases. The student lawyer is responsible for planning each lawyering activity, reviewing the plan with the Clinic faculty supervisor, conducting the activity and finally, reflecting on the experience and the usefulness of the preparation. Throughout the year, each student engages in client interviewing and counseling, fact investigation and witness interviewing, legal research and analysis, and drafting a variety of legal documents and instruments. Most students have the opportunity to appear before a court or administrative tribunal.

The cases handled involved a variety of legal issues faced by disabled persons and their families. Clients were referred by several social service agencies with which we have formed alliances, including Mt. Vernon Board of Education, NAMI of Westchester, and UCP of Westchester, Taconic Innovations and Jowonio, case management agencies serving the developmentally disabled. Several clients were referred by other Clinic clients or self-referred. All of the clients are low income. They are unable to pay for the legal help they need and were unable to secure representation from other sources of free legal services. Several cases completed during the year were begun during previous years.

A total of 39 matters were handled by students during the grant year. * Of these, 17 were new matters. Fourteen matters were concluded by the end of the grant year and 25 are pending.

The cases involved the following substantive areas:

Area	Number of Clients
Art. 17-A Guardianship	15
Special Education	4
Lifetime and Estate Planning	4
Estate Administration	5
Benefits Issues	3
Special Needs Trusts	4
Human Rights	3
Art. 17 Guardianship	1

Case Examples

Last year we described L.S.'s age discrimination case before the Westchester Human Rights Commission. The Administrative Law Judge found that respondents had discriminated against LS when she was forced to retire at age 72, two years before she was eligible for a full pension. L.S. was awarded two years' back pay and the difference between her reduced pension and full pension. The respondents' appeal has been dismissed and we are in the process of securing payment of the award for our client.

We are handling two employment discrimination cases before the Westchester County Human Rights Commission. One case, which involved the layoff of a 64-year old man, was tried before an Administrative Law Judge in April. The students conducted a two and a half-day hearing on behalf of the client. We are awaiting a decision from the Administrative Law Judge. Another employment discrimination case is scheduled for a hearing in July.

* During the summer of 2010, with Federal work study funds and grants from two Clinic alumni, three students were hired to assist with on-going and new matters. During the summer of 2011, three students are working in the Clinic, two for pay and one for credit through our Legal Services Externship.

We continued to work with families who wish to become guardians of their adult disabled children. Students worked with 15 such clients during the year. All clients have been counseled about the guardianship process and assisted in identifying standby guardians and obtaining necessary certifications from doctors and psychologists. Letters of guardianship have been issued by the Surrogate in one case. Decisions are pending in three cases. Four clients decided not to proceed. Petitions are being prepared in the remaining cases.

Four clients were assisted with the preparation and signing of wills, health care proxies and powers of attorneys. Three of these clients were elderly and wished to plan for future disability as well as for the distribution of their estates after death. One client is the parent of a severely disabled child who wanted to make sure that her daughter's inheritance would not interfere with her eligibility for government benefits.

Four clients were assisted with special needs trusts. We represented the trustee of a special needs trust after the beneficiary died. An accounting was prepared, submitted and approved by the Department of Social Services. We also assisted another client, the trustee of her child's special needs trust, with the preparation of an annual report and advocated for her at the Social Security Administration so that funds from the Special Needs Trust were handled correctly. Permission from the Surrogate's Court to establish a trust for the disabled adult child of a client is pending.

We are involved in five cases requiring the administration of modest estates in Surrogate's Court. Each of these cases involved extensive investigation or challenging family relations. During the year, one estate was settled, and the proceeds placed in a pooled trust for our client, the sole beneficiary of her father's estate. We are awaiting a final refund from the IRS before closing a second case. A petition for letters of administration has been filed for one client, and we are finalizing the petition for another. The final case is open in Putnam Surrogate's Court. These cases provide excellent experience for the students and a service to the clients who would otherwise see their modest inheritances spent on investigators and lawyers.

In each of the four Special Education cases, the students attended Committee on Special Education (CSE) meetings with the parents and secured needed services for the children.

Community Outreach

Clinic students and other law student volunteers participated in Westchester County's Senior Law Day on October 14, 2010. After audience members heard a presentation about health care proxies, the law student volunteers assisted them with completing health care proxies and answered their individual questions.

Prof. Flint spoke with members of Hope House, a self-help organization for the disabled in Port Chester, New York. The audience was interested in learning how returning to work would affect their Social Security Disability and Supplemental Security Income benefits and how to avoid incurring overpayment of benefits.

To meet the needs of parents of adult children with developmental disabilities, a training program for volunteer attorneys to represent parents in Art. 17-A guardianship proceedings in Surrogate's Court was held on November 16, 2010. Pace Law School's Continuing Education Department arranged for continuing legal education credit for attendees.

Plans for 2011-2012

The Clinic is being offered again next year as a year-long course. Seven students are enrolled, six full-time students and one part-time student. We anticipate handling a similar mix of litigation and transaction matters, assisting low income persons without other means of securing needed legal services and giving future lawyers the skills necessary to help this vulnerable population.

Dear Mr. Ruben,

I am writing with my evaluation of Christina Reggio's EJA-sponsored summer legal clerkship with the Immigration Center for Women and Children. I have worked with hundreds of law students and lawyers in 20 years of public interest practice. Tina's work stood out among the very best of them. She learns exceptionally quickly and does a stunning amount of extremely high quality work.

ICWC provides direct legal representation of immigrant crime victims in application for lawful immigration status. Our goal is to reach and serve as many people as we can, while maintaining a 100% approval rate for applications and treating clients with dignity and care. Tina handled a huge caseload of 16 clients and assisted ICWC staff with 18 additional cases. She conducted dozens of eligibility screenings, and her analysis of callers' eligibility was superb.

Tina has a deeper understanding of the scope and nuances of U Visa law than most experienced practitioners in this very new field of practice. She frequently raised issues that challenged my understanding or interpretation of a provision or approach in this very new field. Even more important, she suggested solutions that invariably incorporated the most salient purpose of the applicable provision and reflected her client's reality. The declarations she wrote with clients were relevant, clear, compelling and authentic. Tina also wrote requests to law enforcement agencies for endorsements of crime victims' immigration applications. Those requests were persuasive, and the certifications she drafted for law enforcement endorsements were clear and compelling. Tina is also very skilled at explaining complex legal concepts in Spanish to clients so they can be effective partners in building their cases and minimize retrauma.

Tina is also an outstanding team player. She was both eager and exceptionally competent at handling whatever our new office needed in order to work at greatest efficiency – from building furniture and planning office space use to mentoring new volunteers. Her attitude and work habits were all far beyond my expectations, and she has been a joy to work with.

Our team here at ICWC is extremely grateful to EJA for making it possible for Tina to spend her summer working with us on legal status applications for the most vulnerable immigrants.

Sincerely,

Re: Host Organization's Evaluation for Fellowship Recipient Jose Galvan

Dear Mr. Ruben:

This summer we were fortunate to host Jose Galvan through a fellowship from Equal Justice America. We are pleased to confirm that Jose successfully completed the internship. His exceptional work ethic, enthusiasm, and sharp research skills made him a valuable asset to our office.

Jose worked full-time for ten weeks at the Equal Justice Center's office in San Antonio, Texas on legal advocacy to help low-wage working people recover unpaid wages. His work consisted of handling litigation tasks, such as drafting affidavits, filing motions, and conducting legal research for briefing. Jose also handled negotiations with defendants and helped recover wages owed to our clients. Jose's Spanish speaking skills enabled him to directly interact with EJC clients as the majority of represented workers are Spanish speakers. Jose's Spanish skills were also complemented by his cultural sensitivity and first-hand understanding of the plight of immigrant workers in San Antonio.

Our goal in hosting Jose was to provide hands-on legal experience in a supportive environment. Jose was trained and supervised by attorneys, however, Jose demonstrated very early on he was reliable, practiced sound judgment, and was willing to tackle a challenging task. Jose made such a great impression at our office that we hope we can find a way to bring him back. We are confident Jose will be an exceptional public interest attorney.

Given our limited resources as a nonprofit, we often cannot hire interns like Jose. Fellowship opportunities such as those offered by Equal Justice America enable us to recruit students to help us do valuable work. We would like to thank Equal Justice America for its contribution and we hope to host future recipients of this fellowship.

Sincerely,

Re: Julia Bizer, EJA Fellowship Recipient Evaluation

Dear Mr. Ruben:

Thank you for providing a fellowship for law student intern Julia Bizer. It was our pleasure to have Julia work with us for ten weeks this summer.

From her first day at CVLAS, Julia showed that she was dedicated to serving our clients and learning as much about being a lawyer as possible. She was extremely hard working and put a remarkable amount of effort into each assigned task.

When she started her internship, she indicated that she was interested in learning about a variety of areas of law. She worked on family law, housing, social security, consumer, and unemployment compensation cases. She eagerly did whatever was necessary. She gave telephone advice, interviewed clients in our office, wrote briefs, drafted motions, and composed client letters. She also helped us by conducting initial intakes of clients.

Julia expressed an interest in arguing cases. In late June, she argued an administrative appeal before a Special Examiner of the Virginia Employment Commission under my supervision. Before the hearing, she researched and drafted a brief in support of her argument. The brief was well written and I made only minimal changes to it. She was also well prepared for the arguments. At the hearing, she was poised and answered the Special Examiner's questions appropriately.

Julia also prepared to argue a Protective Order hearing in Circuit Court. On the day of the trial, the adverse party asked for a continuance and Julia was not able to try the case. Although she did not get to practice her advocacy skills, she worked tirelessly in prepping the client, witnesses, and herself for the trial. I have no doubt that she would have done well in the hearing.

Julia split her time between working with me and working with the other staff attorney, Sara Blose. Sara reports that Julia conducted client interviews, drafted memos, and calculated spousal support. Julia also helped her by researching and outlining several presentations. Sara found Julia's work to be invaluable.

Julia also has excellent Spanish language skills. She drafted several letters to clients in Spanish. She also served as a translator and conducted initial intakes for Spanish speaking clients. This was beneficial because no one in our office speaks the language.

Although the majority of Julia's work was law related, she was also very helpful in other capacities. We recently experienced a layoff in our office and we no longer have a receptionist. Julia was willing to answer the doors and serve as the initial point of contact for our clients. She was very personable, but also professional.

Julia increased the performance level in our office. Several members of our staff commented that they wished she could stay during the school year and beyond. Our clients were certainly better served because we had her around.

Thank you for the opportunity to have this Equal Justice America fellowship recipient work in our office. We truly appreciate the fellowships that your agency offers. It is sometimes difficult to get students to come work in the Petersburg office because few law students live in the area. This opportunity for funding helps encourage students to come. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Jessica W. Thompson

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I had the pleasure of supervising Alisa Whitfield while she was a summer intern at the East Bay Community Law Center's Neighborhood Justice Clinic ("NJC"). NJC provides direct legal assistance to low-income individuals in Alameda County. Our clinics focus on the areas of the homelessness criminalization, debt collection defense and small claims litigation. Community members obtain assistance by meeting with law student advocates at one of several walk-in and appointment-based legal clinics. Student advocates perform follow-up legal work during their non-clinic hours. Alisa spent approximately seven or more hours per week meeting with clients one-on-one and served over thirty clients during the course of the summer.

NJC clients are often mentally ill and always in crisis. I was particularly impressed by Alisa's calm and professional demeanor with her clients and her ability to put clients at ease. She manages to strike that perfect balance where she both connects with her clients and remains their professional counsel. She received nothing but glowing reviews on the client surveys they fill out at the end of their appointments.

Alisa's ability to multi-task and follow-up with her clients was exceptional. She worked extremely efficiently, and consistently requested more work from the supervising attorneys. When during the course of a client's representation, we encountered unforeseen legal issues, Alisa volunteered to do the research without being asked. She also developed templates for future students' use. Her legal writing is cogent and her ability to present the facts of each case in a compelling way distinguished her from her peers this summer.

On a personal level, Alisa was always a cheerful, positive presence in the office, and the lead organizer of social events and office bonding. Other students relied on her for assistance and a first edit of their work. I appreciated her energy and ability to create office camaraderie. She works well with everyone.

The East Bay Community Law Center is grateful to Equal Justice America for providing Alisa the funding necessary to allow her to work on behalf of our clients. Our clinic model is based on student advocacy under the supervision of attorneys. We would be unable to work on behalf of the community without these students and the assistance provided by organizations such as Equal Justice America. We really appreciate Alisa's great work with our clients, and we loved getting to know her.

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I am pleased to write this evaluation of Michael Shea's work during the past summer at Equip for Equality ("EFE"). During his time at EFE, Mike was an important member of our team and made significant contributions to our work. He displayed strong intellect, compassion, strong writing skills and talent for legal analysis. Mike was very enthusiastic and dedicated to the work we provide to parents in our Special Education Clinic, making it a pleasure to mentor him.

As you know, Equip for Equality's Special Education Clinic serves the entire state of Illinois and it provides free legal services for children with special education needs. EFE has four offices, three of which are small satellite offices in downstate Illinois where one or two attorneys work in each office. While at EFE, Mike worked in our Clinic in the Springfield, Illinois office. Mike displayed great self-sufficiency skills, confidence and independence in that setting.

Mike received uniformly positive reviews for his work, effort, and commitment. Mike displayed excellent research and writing skills, and showed talent in oral advocacy. He wrote well researched memos and he also analyzed many cases in a variety of topics. Mike accompanied his supervising attorney to two important settlement conferences and he played significant roles in the negotiations.

Although Mike had completed only one year of law school prior to his internship with EFE, Mike's rich life experiences prior to law school provided him with many practical advantages over most first year law students. Mike was consistently prompt and effective in his assistance to parents who called the Clinic's Helpline. He was able to engage easily with parents' concerns, identified the issues efficiently and applied the laws to the facts.

With his familiarity with special education issues, Mike was effective in relating the facts, analyzing cases and discussing strategies in EFE case management discussions. When Mike attended a resolution session (similar to a settlement conference) with his supervising attorney for a student with autism, he offered valuable suggestions to the supervising attorney and the parents in a caucus during the five hour meeting. In a different case, a mediation, Mike offered suggestions that resulted in reaching a significant offer of settlement after the conclusion of the meeting.

Mike displayed excellent strong writing and research skills. Mike wrote two memos on the Illinois State Board of Education's policies regarding food allergies and the application of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 on students with food allergies. The memos were well-researched and very well written.

Mike's dedication to the Clinic's work was evident during his summer internship. He was a kind and caring person that parents appreciated during the Helpline calls. His excellent interpersonal skills and his consistently positive attitude made Mike an important member of our team. Equip for Equality was fortunate to have Mike intern with our Clinic and we are very grateful for Equal Justice America's support of his internship.

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I am writing to express how pleased we were to host Mishan Araujo as an Equal Justice America fellow this summer. The Harriett Buhai Center for Family Law depends on the help of volunteers and student interns to help serve as many members of the community as possible. Without the help of our law student interns, our impact in Los Angeles' low income community would be significantly diminished.

Mishan excelled as a summer intern, taking on a variety of projects and handling them all with ease and maturity. She helped with client intake, case management, research projects, and client appointments. She developed her interviewing skills, her research and writing skills, and gained exposure to the family law court system in Los Angeles County. During our intake appointments, Mishan met with clients and interviewed them thoroughly about their family history, the remedies they were seeking, and any history of domestic violence. She then presented the case to staff attorneys and helped work with them to decide whether or not the case was a good fit for the Center's priorities and whether or not the client could be served through the self-help center at the courthouse in Los Angeles. Mishan showed tremendous empathy and patience with our clients.

Mishan also met with clients one-on-one and guided them through various stages of the divorce process including orders on support, custody and visitation, and drafting proposed judgments. Mishan worked with clients to create their declarations for the Court and assisted clients in determining which facts were most pertinent to their case and to the relief they were seeking.

Lastly, Mishan helped us get an important new project off the ground. The Hague International Service Convention was recently made directly applicable to family law cases and we had a number of clients whose cases were permanently on hold while we tried to understand the requirements of this complex treaty. However, thanks to the research and materials Mishan put together, we now have a process in place and these clients will be able to proceed with their divorce or paternity cases.

We have deeply appreciated the time and energy Mishan has been able to contribute to our organization. She made a tremendous contribution to the Center and our clients through her work this summer. The internship has also helped Mishan develop valuable skills in client interaction, client interviewing, research, and writing.

We would be thrilled to host other Equal Justice America fellows in the future.

Midlothian, VA 23112

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I am writing to let you know how much Community Action Program Legal Services, Inc. (CAPLAW) enjoyed and benefited from our summer with Equal Justice America fellow Sheena James Knox.

CAPLAW is a nonprofit organization that offers legal assistance and training to the nationwide network of Community Action Agencies (CAAs), nonprofit organizations and local government entities that work to reduce poverty, revitalize low-income communities, and empower low-income individuals and families to become fully self-sufficient through advocacy and services.

Sheena's time with CAPLAW was extremely productive. While she was here, Sheena researched, analyzed and prepared materials about issues of great importance and consequence to our organization, the CAAs we work with and the low-income clients they serve. In particular, Sheena assisted in researching and creating a PowerPoint presentation for CAPLAW on the new Americans with Disabilities Act regulations. The presentation not only concisely explained the key aspects of the regulations but also used hypotheticals and examples to convey the impact of the regulations on CAAs. Additionally, Sheena assisted in researching and drafting an article for CAPLAW's bi-annual newsletter which addressed the legal and practical implications of different cost-saving staffing options for CAAs during tough financial times. For the newsletter, Sheena also analyzed the application of federal and state immigration laws requiring certain employers to verify an employee's eligibility to work in the United States. Sheena adeptly synthesized the recent developments in the law relating to the issue and succinctly conveyed in writing the relevance of the developments to CAAs.

CAPLAW greatly benefited from Sheena's ability to quickly spot issues, comprehend legal concepts and convey complex legal matters in a precise and clear way. Sheena quickly familiarized herself with a wide variety of legal topics ranging from lobbying to governance to employee benefits to open records and meetings laws. Sheena's thorough research and keen analysis of the legal issues she addressed enabled CAPLAW to promptly and confidently advise CAAs on their options, rights and responsibilities.

CAPLAW is deeply grateful for the support we received from Equal Justice America. This support enabled CAPLAW to address critical legal issues facing CAAs and their clients and to provide Sheena with an opportunity to hone her legal research, writing and consultation skills while learning about public interest law.

The on-going fundraising by Equal Justice America is an incredible benefit to CAPLAW and greatly increases our organization's ability to recruit high quality legal fellows such as Sheena.

Dear Mr. Ruben,

Before I begin, I would like to express my sincere thanks to you and Equal Justice America for the work that you do. Public interest legal work on behalf of those who would not otherwise be able to afford legal services is both extremely important and extremely fulfilling. As is widely known, law students are frequently worried about money. Some want to make as much as they can while others, like the students you fund, think that just enough is plenty as long as it sustains them in doing this kind of work. Your organization makes our work possible and we are all indebted to you for it.

I spent this past summer working at Equip For Equality (EFE). EFE is a disability rights agency in Chicago that deals with a wide variety of legal matters related to our clients' disabilities. My work was in the Special Education Clinic where I advocated for the rights of students with disabilities. My work was also wide ranging and covered issues from eligibility for special education services to improper graduation.

Over the summer, I dealt with an upsettingly large number of cases in which the local school district was denying eligibility to students with disabilities. Unfortunately, even when a medical professional diagnoses a student with a particular disability, the student must still go through the statutorily prescribed procedures in order to be eligible for services under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA). Often, schools fight eligibility because they know it will commit them to costly special education services. Most of the cases of denial of eligibility that I handled were for students with Learning Disabilities. In one instance, a school had denied a mother and her son eligibility on prior occasions and the student, now in his second year of high school, was failing English classes. I provided self-advocacy assistance to the mother and taught her how to draft a letter to the school district formally requesting a "case study evaluation" (an evaluation to determine whether he had a disability) and a meeting to determine eligibility. After learning how to draft this letter with the relevant legal language, the mother submitted it to the district and her son was found to be eligible and began receiving academic support.

In another case, I helped represent a class of parents of students with allergies. The parents contacted our organization because the district had decided to roll out a "breakfast in the classroom" program in which all students would be provided with breakfast prior to the start of the school day. The parents agreed with the purpose of the program but were concerned about its implementation. The parents were concerned because the school decided to serve the meals in classrooms and thus, the students would be exposed to harmful, and in some cases deadly, allergens. After discussing this issue with attorneys in our office, I drafted a demand letter to the district asking them to comply with disability laws and make accommodations for students with allergies. The letter subsequently lead to negotiations and we were able to convince the district to remove most allergens from the menu, move meals in some schools to the cafeteria where proper cleaning could be done, and in other schools, require cleaning of the classroom prior to the start of class. Additionally, I also worked with individual parents to ensure that their children's "504 Plans" and emergency action plans had language in them that would force the schools to provide adequate protection.

In an additional case, I helped prepare for an administrative hearing on behalf of a student with an emotional disability. In this case, the student had been moved out of the general education environment and into an environment where he was being educated only with students with disabilities. As a policy matter, the law prefers that students be educated in the least restrictive environment in which they can make progress so that they are socially integrated with non-disabled peers. This student had shown that he was capable of being in the general education environment. I helped prepare for the administrative hearing by drafting motions, opening and closing statements and lists of questions for direct and cross-examination. Our agency was successful at the hearing and we were able to set up an agreement in which the student would be able to transition into general education classes at his neighborhood school as he met certain benchmarks.

These are just a few examples of the more than 50 clients I worked for this year. There is nothing else I would have rather spent my time doing than helping these students. In my mind, students with disabilities are one of the most vulnerable populations in the country. As people with disabilities they face an uphill legal battle just to secure a level playing field and equal opportunity. As minors, they are often marginalized and cannot fight for themselves. Few groups need advocates more than children with disabilities and I am proud that I was able to be an advocate for them, even if only for a few brief months. I hope and expect that this summer will be the launching point for a long and successful public interest career.

Thank you again.

Best,

Dear Mr. Ruben:

This summer, I worked as a law clerk at the Family Law Project. Located in downtown Ann Arbor, the Family Law Project is a legal service organization that provides free legal assistance to survivors of domestic violence in Washtenaw County. Most of their clients are referred from SafeHouse, the nearby domestic violence shelter, and cannot otherwise afford legal representation to protect themselves from their partners and spouses. The Family Law Project primarily assists clients with divorce, custody cases, and personal protection orders.

This position provided me with a wide range of responsibilities. There were three staff attorneys and three law clerks, so I had plenty of hands-on guidance and supervision. I worked on all aspects of family law cases: interviewing clients, drafting pleadings, performing discovery, and appearing at motions, evidentiary hearings, and settlement conferences.

My proudest experience this summer was preparing for and appearing on an evidentiary hearing for a custody case. The client was a 24-year-old mother whose former partner was physically abusive during their high school relationship. She and the father shared joint custody of the child in question. The child was of the age to enroll in kindergarten, and the parties had to decide with whom she would live during the school year since they lived four hours away. My first task in this case was to draft the requests to admit and interrogatories during discovery. Then, my supervisor and I decided what we wanted to submit as exhibits for the trial and whom we wanted to testify as witnesses. I prepared the direct testimony of my client and the re-direct. I learned an incredible amount during the experience about civil procedure and trial technique. It is certain to be something I will always remember.

Working at the family law project gave me a closer look at poverty and legal issues facing the poor. I had some experience working with low-income communities in the past, but I had never had the opportunity to help low-income clients recognize and enforce their rights. Working with this particular community, domestic violence survivors, was especially meaningful to me because I have always been passionate about women's issues. Day-to-day, I found fulfillment by helping to make their lives better and being an advocate for their needs and rights.

The particular office where I worked was organized, professional, and committed to the cause of helping survivors of domestic violence. They were friendly and always available to give guidance to the law clerks in the office. One of the most encouraging things for a law student in such an early stage in her career is that they all truly loved their jobs. The head attorney in the office is considered to be a statewide expert in the field of Family Law, and has even written the chapter on domestic violence in the Michigan Family Law Practice book.

This experience has inspired me to follow my heart and pursue a career in public interest law. I especially loved working in direct legal services and working with clients one-on-one.

From what I've learned this summer, working in a legal aid office would not only give me the professional opportunity to appear in court frequently and take on a lot of responsibility at a very early stage in my career, but more importantly, it offers the satisfaction of staying connected to the realities of poor communities and working toward alleviating their hardship.

I am incredibly grateful that Equal Justice America helped make this summer workable by funding my internship. This source of support has encouraged me to believe that a career in public interest law is viable and that there are organizations to support those who want to pursue a career advocating for low-income communities.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I chose to work at the Legal Aid Society Juvenile Rights Practice (“JRP”) because of my interest in Family Law and litigation. JRP represents children in abuse and neglect cases and children in juvenile delinquency cases. This summer I predominantly worked on child protective cases.

The attorney for the child in a child protective case takes a direct advocacy position and tries to advocate for whatever the child wants. JRP gives children an opportunity for children to have a voice when everyone around them is making difficult life decisions on their behalf. Giving kids the opportunity to have a legal team advocate for what they want gives them a feeling that there is someone out there rooting for them and fighting for what they want. JRP is about bringing families together and taking the perspective that families come in all different shapes and sizes and are certainly not one size fits all. This summer I became passionate about this type of work and gained a better understanding as to why it is so important for children to have an attorney.

JRP also provided me with insight into the juvenile justice system. While I spent most of my time working on child protective cases, I did have the opportunity engaged in some delinquency work. It was interesting to see how the clients in child protective cases are viewed as so sympathetic and the same clients in delinquency cases are treated and looked at in such a negative way. While at JRP I had the opportunity to do client intake and observe arraignments and also visit a juvenile detention facility. These experiences taught me more about the juvenile justice system and gave me further insight into this field of law.

At Legal Aid, I gained many practical legal skills. First, I had the opportunity to argue on the record in Manhattan family court. This valuable opportunity gave me the ability to practice litigation in a real courtroom, rather than the simulated courtrooms in law school. Additionally, I had the opportunity to interact with clients through client interviews and home visits. Finally, I had the opportunity to engage in legal research and writing. Overall, Legal Aid gave me the opportunity to gain practical legal skills and experience in a new field of law in addition to everything I learned about the foster care system and the juvenile justice system.

An internship at JRP would be valuable to anyone seeking to do public interest work because in addition to insight into this field of law, it provides a broad skill-set and experience in the legal field, specifically litigation. Additionally, JRP provides insight into how a large legal services organization operates. Finally, JRP provides an excellent office environment and plenty of supervision throughout the entire summer. I never found myself bored the entire time I was there. Overall I had an excellent experience at JRP and look forward to working there part time throughout the school year. Based on this great experience, I hope to work at JRP after graduation.

I would like to thank Equal Justice America for this wonderful opportunity. I was able to work in an area of law that I am passionate and pay my rent! The work EJA does is invaluable, and I believe the program can lead many law students into a career of public service.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mr. Ruben:

I am writing to thank you for providing me with an Equal Justice America Fellowship which enabled me to have an amazing summer internship working with the Special Education Unit at the New York Legal Assistance Group (NYLAG). Without your generous support I would have been unable to work with the amazing attorney's at NYLAG providing legal services for children with disabilities and their families.

The attorneys and volunteers of the Special Education unit at NYLAG provide legal services to low income families with disabled children. While I come from a family of teachers, I have no educational background myself, and no personal education in special education or special education law, which is regulated under the Individuals with Disabilities Act (IDEA). Working with Laura Davis, Phyllis Brochstein, and Joel Mandalbaum enabled me to learn the ins and outs of IDEA and the corresponding New York Education Laws that regulate how public and private schools educate and provide services for disabled students.

Through this internship I gained experience researching special education issues for a variety of cases involving families with children who have been parentally placed in private schools as a result of the failures of public school districts to provide a free appropriate public education (FAPE) as mandated by IDEA and case law from Impartial Hearing Officer decisions, State Review Officer decisions, New York State and Federal Courts. Additionally, I gained experience reviewing student medical, social, and academic evaluations, Individualized Education Programs (IEP's), and recommended placements for legal issues at various stages of the special education process. As the summer progressed I worked with Joel and Phyllis building cases for three different disabled children based on their academic and medical records for Impartial Hearing Requests which is the first of the process for gaining administrative review of school district placements and IEP's provided for disabled students.

One of the best experiences of the summer was attending a Resolution session (another step in the process when contesting the educational placement or services provided or suggested by a public school for a disabled student) with Laura Davis and the mother of a disabled student who is autistic. The Resolution session was requested by Laura in this case, unlike many other cases where we waive this procedural step because it rarely leads to a solution, however, here, the issue was with the number of additional afterschool, in home service hours this child was going to receive in the coming school year. The school had decided to remove his additional home service instruction, even though doctors and his parents had requested that it continue for the 2011-2012 school year. At the Resolution session, with our help, we were able to keep the services from getting cut completely, so that he will continue to receive the services 3 days a week in the families home. For me, it was not so much what we were able to gain for this child, but the mother's sincere gratitude for what we were able to help her gain for her son. She was so happy that she was hugging both Laura and I, she thanked us repeatedly, and even cried. It was so rewarding to know that our work had provided so much happiness for this mother, and the services for her son that she knew is so important to his continued growth and education.

I have been committed to pursuing a career in public interest law since beginning my legal education and to providing help to those unjustly affected by social constructs and economic inequality. However, my work with NYLAG has only increased my dedication to providing legal services for low-income families and their children. I am extremely grateful to Equal Justice America for providing me a fellowship to pursue this opportunity. I have gained invaluable education in special education law, and an incredible experience.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ruben:

First, I want to thank you for the extraordinary work you do in providing funding for students to work in programs such as Legal Aid of Western Michigan. The attorneys and support staff that I had the distinct pleasure of working with taught me more this summer than my previous two years of law school. I really appreciate all you have done to make this and similar experiences for other students possible. I would like to tell you a little about a few of the clients I was able to help this summer.

One of my first cases involved a woman who had her bank account garnished, despite the fact that it was comprised entirely of exempt Social Security funds. The client had filed a relevant objection based on the exempt status of the funds, but she did not have all of the proper proof she needed at the first hearing. The hearing was adjourned, so she could obtain the proper paperwork. At the conclusion of the hearing, she was provided with a Civil Disposition, which, inter alia, included a court date. Our client did not realize a date was already set, and waited for notice to arrive via mail. Consequently, she missed her court date. Upon discovering her account was overdrawn, she contacted us for help. I drafted a Motion for Reconsideration or Relief From Order, along with a supporting brief. The judge, in a very generous ruling, granted the Motion for Relief From Order and ordered the funds returned to our client, minus court costs, which were not significant.

My first solo court appearance was in an expungement hearing for a woman who had a twelve-year-old conviction. Following her conviction, my client led a very respectable life. While still a migrant worker in the fields, she started putting herself through school, with the goal of becoming a Registered Nurse. She was on the Dean's List for several semesters and was about to start an internship. Having this conviction on her record could have proven to be a significant stumbling block for her in an otherwise successful pursuit. The judge commended her on her turnaround, and ordered the conviction set aside. The client was incredibly grateful for our help.

Finally, the clients I interacted with the most fell into the family law category. Often, women who decided to divorce abusive husbands would seek our help. Of course, our first concern was always the safety of the client. We always emphasized the importance of a safety plan and referred the client to local resources. The strength of these women was a constant source of inspiration. Many of these women had nothing as they faced the reality of starting over.

In closing, the aforementioned individuals represent only a few of the people I interacted with as part of my experience at Legal Aid of Western Michigan. My time this summer has been one of the most rewarding experiences of my life. I learned so much on the “legal side” of things, but I learned even more about the plight of the indigent. The problems these individuals face are often unique and would otherwise go unaddressed. Further, many of the people we helped this summer came to us as a last resort. Without our help, I believe many of them would have been unsuccessful in their cases, despite the merits of their positions. Thank you again for making this summer possible for me.

Sincerely,

Dear Mr. Ruben,

Thank you so much for awarding me with an Equal Justice America fellowship this summer. My experience at a legal aid agency was invaluable, and I learned a lot about the type of work that is done at public interest organizations. My experience this summer affirmed my desire to practice public interest law when I graduate from law school.

One of the most rewarding aspects of my internship was that I learned about many different areas of law. My sponsoring organization, the Legal Assistance Foundation (LAF), assists low-income clients with various types of legal issues, ranging from housing law to immigration law. Although my organization has special projects with attorneys devoted to each type of practice, I worked from the North Suburban service office in Evanston, Illinois. Therefore, the attorneys and interns at that location did not specialize in one area of law; we worked on all types of cases, including housing, public benefits, consumer, and family law. The majority of my work was with family law cases because I have a specific interest in family law. I am also very interested in immigration law, so I was able to collaborate with some of the immigration attorneys at the downtown office to work on VAWA and U-Visa cases as well.

The best experience and memory of my summer was with a young 25-year-old Nepali woman. I worked on her divorce and her VAWA (Violence Against Women Act) petition on my own (with some supervision). When LAF was deciding whether to take on her case, they expressed that they could only take her case if I was able to work on it. Furthermore, the family law attorney could only accept the client's divorce case if the immigration attorneys accepted her VAWA case. It was a great feeling to know that I helped someone who otherwise would not have received legal services from LAF because of the organization's heavy caseload, lack of resources, and lack of attorney availability. She was very appreciative of my help when I finished her case. I was very happy that I was able to make a difference in her life. I hope I am able to follow her case and find out when Immigration makes a decision about her VAWA petition.

I also enjoyed working with the attorneys at LAF. They came from very different backgrounds, and it was interesting to learn about why they chose careers in public interest law. They were very welcoming and laid back, which made the work atmosphere nice.

I learned a lot this summer from my internship, and I thoroughly enjoyed my work. I was able to perform many tasks that I had never done before, including drafting petitions for dissolution of marriage, researching public benefits and consumer law, and conducting extensive client intake. I especially enjoyed interviewing clients because direct interaction with clients helps to keep our legal work meaningful and interesting. Some of their cases were sad, but they helped me realize the huge need for free legal services in Chicago in all areas of law.

I hope to work at another legal aid agency or public interest organization next summer. With my 711 license, I will be better able to assist the organization. I am glad that I worked at the Legal Assistance Foundation this summer, and the Equal Justice America fellowship allowed me to take on this internship. Thank you again for this wonderful opportunity. As I begin my second year of law school, I have already used much of what I learned this summer. The Equal Justice America Fellowship Program is a great opportunity for students to pursue careers in public interest law and learn more about what it takes to be a legal aid lawyer.

Dan Ruben,

This summer I was able to serve as a law clerk for the Michigan Children's Law Center (MCLC) in Detroit, Michigan. The Equal Justice America Fellowship provided me with the financial and moral support that was necessary for me to spend my summer working for a non-profit.

During my time at MCLC my primary responsibility was to conduct legal research in the area of child welfare law and juvenile delinquency. Additionally, I had the opportunity to observe a wide variety of hearings and trials that took place in the juvenile court. Finally, at the end of my clerkship I had the experience of being sworn in as a student attorney and was able to cover a preliminary neglect hearing.

While I came to MCLC with my own experiences in child welfare law as a former Child Protective Services worker in Arizona, I realized that the system, laws, policies, and procedures in Michigan are very different than what I had experienced in my previous work and I had the opportunity to learn about Michigan child welfare law, juvenile law, and the specific challenges faced in the city of Detroit. I have found that it is particularly important for children growing up in impoverished cities like Detroit to have appropriate and effective advocates to ensure that instead of being funneled into a prison system, their talents are discovered and cultivated.

Prior to my time at MCLC I had no experience in criminal defense and during the summer I had the opportunity to learn more about criminal law and criminal defense. For the first time in my life I was able to observe a full criminal trial. It was a very powerful experience to see a child facing charges that would impact the rest of his life and to watch an attorney represent this child successfully. This experience has created an interest in providing criminal defense for those who are vulnerable and disadvantaged. Too often the poor are not able to seek out legal representation on their own because of a lack of financial resources and as a result, are not provided with the adequate representation that they are entitled to. I found it inspiring to watch an attorney work so hard for a client. It was incredible to work with attorneys who were motivated by the pursuit for justice, rather than the pursuit of monetary compensation. I had the privilege this summer to work with a team of attorneys that operated under the true spirit of the law. Attorneys who sought tirelessly for justice and consistently worked in the best interests of their clients.

This summer helped to reinforce my desire to work in the field of public interest law. A legal education provides an individual with a tremendous amount of power in the ability to take action in the legal system, but with that power I believe comes a responsibility to advocate for those individuals in our society who are disadvantaged or vulnerable. The work in the classroom during law school is a vital part to becoming a lawyer, however, it is the practical experience of being in a real legal setting that essentially transforms an individual from a student to an attorney. I am so thankful that I had the opportunity to experience real legal work this summer, an experience that would not have been possible if not for the Equal Justice America Fellowship.

Thank You,

INDEPENDENT AUDITOR'S REPORT

Board of Directors
Equal Justice America, Inc.

We have audited the accompanying statement of financial position of Equal Justice America, Inc. (a not-for-profit corporation) as of June 30, 2011, and the related statements of activities, cash flows and functional expenses for the year then ended. These financial statements are the responsibility of Organization's management. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on these financial statements based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether financial statements are free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statements. An audit includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statements. We believe that our audit provides a reasonable basis for our opinion.

In our opinion the financial statements referred to above present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of Equal Justice America, Inc. as of June 30, 2011, and the changes in net assets and its cash flows for the year then ended, in conformity with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

EQUAL JUSTICE AMERICA, INC.
Notes to Financial Statements
For The Year Ended June 30, 2011

Note 1: Nature of Organization and Significant Accounting Policies

Equal Justice America, Inc. (the Organization) is a not-for-profit organization that provides grants to legal service organizations that deliver civil legal assistance to the poor. The Board of Directors and management employees of the Organization acknowledge that, to the best of their ability, all assets received have been used for the purpose for which they were contributed, or have been accumulated to allow management to conduct the operations of the Organization as effectively and efficiently as possible.

Support and Expenses. Contributions received and unconditional promises to give are measured at their fair values and are reported as an increase in net assets. The Organization reports gifts of cash and other assets as restricted support if they are received with donor stipulations that limit the use of the donated assets, or as restricted support if they are received with donor stipulations that limit the use of the donated assets, or if they are designed as support for future periods. When a donor restriction expires, that is, when a stipulated time restriction ends or purpose restriction is accomplished, temporarily restricted net assets are reclassified to unrestricted net assets and reported in the statement of activity as net assets released from restrictions. Donor-restricted contributions whose restrictions are met in the same reporting period are reported as unrestricted support. Currently, the Organization only has unrestricted net assets.

Expenses are recorded when incurred in accordance with the accrual basis of accounting.

Donated Services. A substantial number of unpaid volunteers have made significant contributions of their time to assist in the Organization's programs; however, the donated services are not reflected in the financial statements since the services do not require specialized skills.

Use of Estimates. The preparation of financial statements in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles requires management to make estimates and assumptions that affect the reported amounts of assets and liabilities and disclosure of contingent assets and liabilities at the date of the financial statements and the reported amounts of revenues and expenses during the reporting period. Actual results could differ from those estimates.

Cash and Cash Equivalents. Cash consists of cash held in a checking account and money market account.
